Nation Mourns Death Of President Warren G. Harding

WARREN G. HARDING

CONDENSED LIFE STORY OF WARREN G. HARDING

Warren Gamaliel Harding was born near the village of Corsica, O., Nov. 2, 1865.

His father, Dr. G. T. Harding, was a country physician who added to his income by conducting a small farm. His mother was formerly Miss Phoebe Elizabeth Dickerson.

Warren, the eldest of eight children, attended the village school, and in his fourth year entered the Ohio Central College, in Marion, O. He graduated with a B. S. degree in 1882, and taught school for a year, read law for another year and then was given the ownership of the Marion (Ohio) Star, by his father.

He became a newspaperman.

Harding conducted the newspaper for some time against great financial odds, but finally was forced to sell it. He took a job as reporter on the Marion Mirror, but political differences with the owner resulted in his leaving shortly.

He again became owner of the Star, and, with the assistance of his wife, in 1911.

Formerly Miss Florence Elizabeth Kling, whom he married in 1891, made it highly successful.

Harding first held public office in 1900 when he became state senator. He held this office until 1904 when he took office as lieutenant governor of Ohio. In 1910 he ran for governor but was defeated.

From this time Harding rose rapidly in the councils of the G. O. P., and made the speech nominating William Howard Taft for president at the Chicago convention in 1912.

Senator-President.

In 1914 Harding was elected U. S. senator from Ohio and was temporary chairman of the Republican convention in 1916.

He remained in the Senate until he was nominated for president on the Republican ticket in 1920. He was elected the 29th president of the United States Nov. 2, 1920, on his 55th birthday, and took office March 4, 1921.

Sudden Stroke Of Apoplexy Ends Life As Devoted Wife Reads Him The Daily News

No Time For Farewells—Only Wife And Head Nurse Were Present When The End Came—Mrs. Harding Brave—She Does Not Break Down Under Her Experience.

DEATH A BIG SURPRISE TO PHYSICIANS

THE PRESIDENT IS DEAD.

Death, apparently blocked by medical science, struck suddenly and without warning at 7:30 last night.

The President was definitely on the road to recovery from ptomaine poisoning, acute indigestion and pneumonic infection, which followed them.

DEATH INSTANTANEOUS.

But death found a way through the armor. It struck into the brain with apoplexy and without struggle or word and only a shudder of his weakened frame and the raising of one hand, the nation's head passed beyond.

Tonight they will take Warren G. Harding's body home—back to the White House, where he lived and worked as the Chief Magistrate of the people, who today, shocked beyond expression by his death, mourn for him and with his wife. After the simplest private funeral services in the Presidential suite at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, where he took his bed last Sunday morning, the President's remains will be placed aboard a special train, which will leave San Francisco at 7:00 p. m. for Washington.

He will be laid to rest in his old home town, Marion, Ohio, the country village which he raised from rural obscurity into national prominence. Before the final obsequies, which will mark his burial, the President's body will lie in state in Washington.

DIED AS WIFE READ TO HIM.

The President passed with the sunset. The last rays of California's golden sunshine was pouring into his room where Mrs. Harding sat reading to him from a magazine. Dr. Sawyer, his old friend and personal physician, sat beside him. The President was lying, very still listening to Mrs. Harding read. He seemed to be resting quite comfortably to the watchful eyes of his two nurses, Miss Ruth Powderly and Miss Sue Dausser. He seemed just as he had been all day—comfortable and in better physical condition than at any time since he became ill. There was no apprehension of impending tragedy to any there. Mrs. Harding and the nurses had every reason to feel easier about the condition of the President than at any moment since illness overtook him. They were looking forward without fear or anxiety to the night, another night they believed when the restorative power of sleep would add a little more to the slowly growing strength of the President.

It was a scene of peaceful quiet and contentment. Mrs. Harding read on. She came to the end of a paragraph and paused. She turned to look at her husband.

SPOKE JUST BEFORE DEATH.

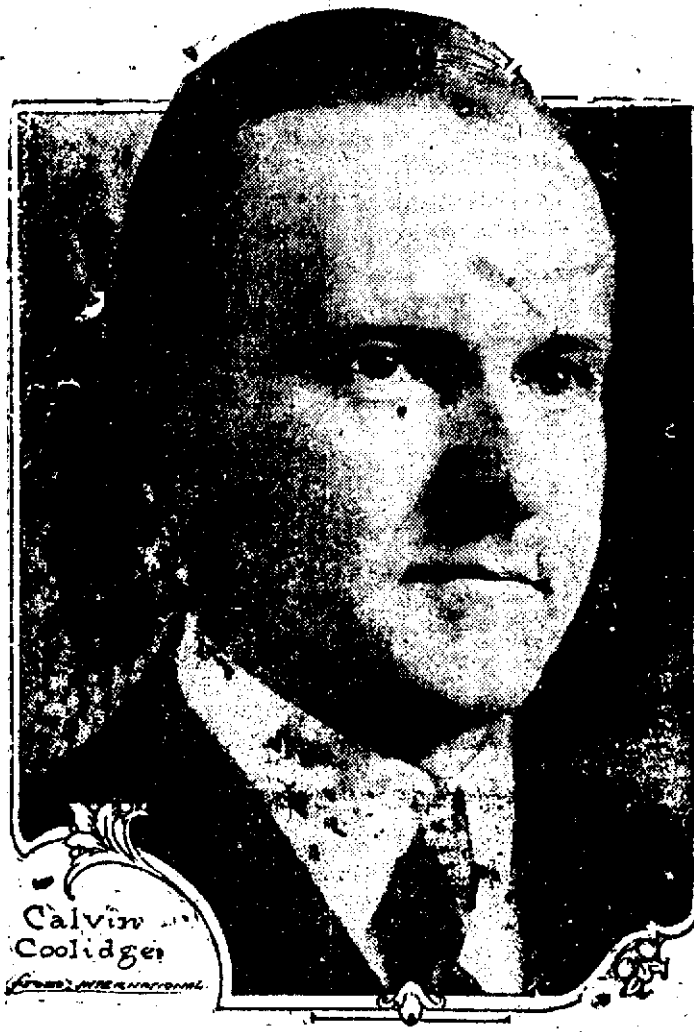

"That sounds good," said Mr. Harding. Mrs. Harding turned again to the magazine and read.

She had not finished a sentence when, as though some one had struck him a sudden and crushing blow, the President threw up one hand over his head convulsively. It was as though he sought to ward off the blow which death, in that peaceful, unguarded moment, had aimed with unerring directness at a vital spot. Then like a man struck by a bolt of lightning, the President stiffened and suddenly dropped back limply; in a brief second, the drawing of a breath, his spirit winged away from the weakened body.

Just in an instant, like the dropping of the sun behind the hills, his life went out. He, who a moment before had been the President of the United States, the object of the solicitude and sympathetic concern of 110,000,000 people, became a bit of clay, and millions, who through the days of his illness had swung with his wife and his close friends through the cycle of alarm, deepening fear, and back to hope, relief and practical certainty of recovery, became mourners.

FATHER BROKEN

Marion, Ohio, Aug. 3.—An aged man, his heart all but broken by the news which came like a dream in the night, lay on the couch in his East Centre street home today and mourned the loss of his boy.

For to Dr. George T. Harding, eighty years old, the first man to see his son sworn in as President of the United States the death of Warren G. Harding was a grief personally as well as a national tragedy. Attendants said the aged physician was nearly broken down. Informed by newspaper men shortly before midnight of his son's death, Doctor Harding sank to his bed mumbling to comfort him in his grief, the doctor said:

"Boys this is terrible. My Warren is gone."

A few minutes later after a group of close friends had gathered at the Harding home to comfort him in his grief, the doctor said:

"Warren had the interest of his country at heart. There never has been a President since Abraham Lincoln who has had the interest of the country at heart like Warren."

POWELL WEAVER RECITAL TONIGHT

The organ recital to be given by Powell Weaver, noted concert organist, in Trinity Methodist church this evening under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Clearfield hospital, will be well worth attending. The excellent program to be rendered was printed in this paper last evening and is being class throughout.

Everybody is invited. No admission fee will be charged but an offering will be taken and the proceeds applied to the Elevator Fund at the hospital.

Mrs. George Morrison had her leg broken at her home on William street last evening.

COMMENT FROM MANY QUARTERS OF THE GLOBE

Wilson Wires Mrs. Harding
Washington, D. C. Aug. 3.—Woodrow Wilson today dispatched a message of sympathy to the widow of President Harding. An army of reporters besieged the Wilson home in S. Street in an effort to secure a public statement on the death of President Harding but Mr. Wilson chose to send his word of condolence direct to Mrs. Harding. His message was not made public here.

Word of the passing of President Harding was given to Mr. Wilson early today. An effort made by Mrs. Wilson to keep the news from him until he arose this morning was unsuccessful.

Poincare's Statement
Paris, Aug. 3.—"The death of President Harding at the present time is a world disaster, which may have wide effect on the present status of world affairs, Premier Poincare said."

"I am deeply grieved and shocked. France is especially sorrowful owing to the President's attitude toward France's problems."

From Lloyd George
London, Aug. 3.—"The death of President Harding adds one more complication to a world already tangled with trouble," former Premier Lloyd George said today.

TO VISIT GRAMPIAN

DuBois business men will take advantage of the opening of the new concrete road and will make up a big motor party to visit the "capital" of Penn township on Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Four hundred automobiles are expected. Mayor Haag is issuing a proclamation asking all the business men to participate in the trip.

Grampien people would like to have Clearfield people participate in the celebration, President of Council Miles Woodie asking The Progress to make that statement.

COOLIDGE TAKES OATH BY LIGHT OF AN OIL LAMP

Aged Father, a Notary Public, Administers Oath With Only Members of Family Present.

AT 2:47 THIS A. M.

Plymouth, Vt., Aug. 3.—By the dim flickering oil lamp Calvin Coolidge took the oath of President of the United States at 2:47 a. m. today. He started for Washington at 7:27 a. m.

Father Official.

Just a few hours after word of the death of Warren G. Harding had roused him from his bed, Coolidge stood in the old parlor of the family farm house in this isolated hamlet, deep in the Vermont mountains, and was sworn in by his aged father, John Coolidge, who is a notary public.

Other Presidents have taken the oath on a high rostrum before the capitol at Washington with the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court administering it, with the troops drawn up in array, with flags and bands and with vast cheering crowds to witness.

A Solemn Scene.

Calvin Coolidge was inaugurated in a small room just across the road from the house where he was born, in the early hours of the morning with his old father—unshaven and colorless—handing him a well thumbed family Bible in the presence of his wife, a chauffeur, Congressman Dale, L. L. Lane, president of the Railway Mail Association of New England, and Secretary Treiser of his Washington office.

These were all that witnessed the solemn, simple ceremony, made all the more solemn by the knowledge that death had just taken his predecessor with shocking suddenness. There was no music save the lonesome chirping of crickets outside, no acclaim save the whispers of a few of the neighbors who gathered outside the house.

The decision to take the oath it once came after receipt of a telegram from Attorney General Daugherty from San Francisco, urging such a course. There were no preliminaries. The witnesses gathered in the parlor, which during the years had been the scene of many events, big in the history of the Coolidge family, but which had never been thought of for the setting for such an event as the inauguration of the thirtieth President of the United States.

Faith in God.

While town folks pressed their faces against the window pane to see "Cal," as many had known him since he was a barefoot lad, Mr. Coolidge dictated the following statement to his secretary:

"Reports have reached me which I fear are correct, that President Harding has gone. The world has lost a great and good man. I mourn his loss. He was my Chief and my friend. It will be my purpose to carry out the policies which he had begun for the service of the American people. For this purpose I shall seek the cooperation of all those who have been associated with the President during his term of office. Those who have given their efforts to assist him I wish to remain in office that they may assist me. I have faith that God will direct the destinies of our nation."

SHERIFF DUKEMAN'S DAUGHTER PREVENTS DELIVERY FROM JAIL

Bellefonte, Pa., Aug. 2.—Only the bravery of Miss Marion Dukeman, serving as deputy sheriff under her father, Harry Dukeman, as well as the assistance of her mother, prevented a well-planned and daring jail delivery here at noon today. Miss Dukeman and two trustees, Timpo Carpell and George Farby, were taking in the prisoners' dinner. As the trustees passed through the doorway Clair Jamison of New Castle, one of the three men who recently broke away from the Rockview Penitentiary and refuses to plead guilty to the crime, jumped from the bathroom and attacked Miss Dukeman.

He pushed her into the corridor, but she grabbed his arm and held to it, screaming for help. Meanwhile, two other prisoners attacked the trustees, but Mrs. Dukeman locked the jail door and kept them from getting out. Sheriff Dukeman had just returned

Rotarians Of Three Clubs Make Merry At The Driving Park

Our innate modesty prevents our writing a fitting preface to the Rotary Club Outing held at the Driving Park yesterday afternoon but Bill Ross of The DuBois Courier puts it this way:

"The big Rotary club gathering at Clearfield yesterday, participated in by the clubs Phillipsburg, Clearfield and DuBois, was an unqualified success in every particular, there being a large gathering from all three organizations. The Clearfield club, through its president Albert Stewart and the various committees, had arranged a program that was interesting from start to finish."

Albert Bigler, head of the Entertainment Committee, had as his assistant Miss Murphy, his personal guest, who proved very charming to the Rotarians as they arrived but her propensity for becoming ill led many into embarrassing situations. A demure, dainty bit of a miss, she aroused slumbering sentimental desires for "service above self" in the bosoms of all who made her acquaintance. During the early part of the afternoon Frank B. Reed and John Woods mo-

WITMER PARK PICNIC

The Witmer Park playground moved to the Peewees West Wednesday afternoon as announced. Over thirty children and their supervisor, Miss John took the morning B. R. & P. equipped with base ball implements, bathing suits and the ever popular lunch basket. This is the first excursion of the season and with the ball game, swimming and all was a complete success. The lake scheme is not followed by many playground systems—perhaps because the grounds in many towns are inaccessible to open country, but it is a fine idea and worth following.

Comment From Many Quarters

"The news of the President's death came as a shock to this country as we had been led to believe the crisis was passed. It is regarded by every one as a great loss for his genial, simple, straightforwardness had won for him a genuine respect and liking in this country."

Herrick's Opinion

Paris, Aug. 3.—"The President died a martyr to office," American Ambassador Myron T. Herrick declared in statement today. "He died for his country just as any soldier killed in battle. We were killed by pressure of the great responsibility of his office. The American people now must realize that the office of the President must be reorganized. We must take off some of that load of responsibility. No one can live through it."

U. S. Closes Shop

Washington, D. C. Aug. 3.—The United States Government today closes its doors out of respect to the memory of President Harding. After a conference between Secretary Hughes and Post Master General New, the only two members of the cabinet in the city Hughes issued orders closing all departments of the Government for the day.

Pinchot Acts

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 3.—Governor Pinchot today issued a proclamation setting aside Sunday, Aug. 5th as a day of prayer for the welfare of the nation and in remembrance of President Harding.

"Through his departure," the proclamation states, "the Nation has lost at the very summit of its career a Chief Magistrate whose personal qualities have endeared him to his fellow citizens and whose unexpected death has brought deep grief to all our people."

WEST SIDE PLAY

GROUND PARTY

The West Side Community play-party Friday night has been planned on a scale to take care of the entire Third Ward. Miss Evelyn Smith, the supervisor, has organized the affair to provide for all ages. All the playgrounds will send their horseshoe teams and there will be some inter-ward volley for both boys and girls. The Fourth-of-July prize cup will be on exhibition as a special attraction as it has not yet been seen in the ward that won it. Donations were most generous and all may help themselves to winners' and marshmallows to toast at the big bon fire with the complimentary roll along side. The ice cream will call for nickles but that is a small item.

home from a business trip and, hearing his daughter's screams, ran to her rescue just as the burly prisoner broke from her grasp. With an iron bar he had concealed in his sleeve the infuriated prisoner attacked the Sheriff and hit him twice.

Just as he threw back to hit again, Mrs. Dukeman grabbed the iron and the Sheriff grappled with his assailant. Miss Dukeman ran to the office and came back with her father's revolver, firing one shot into the floor. She admitted later that she would have shot the prisoner if it had not been for the fear of hitting her father. The Sheriff, however, soon overpowered his man and put him behind the bars.

Tunpeo Carpella, one of the trustees, was so badly hurt he had to be sent to the hospital. The delivery was undoubtedly planned by the three convicts who escaped from the Rockview Penitentiary in June, as an examination disclosed the fact that the locks had been broken off the doors of the cells occupied by them.

How to build up your Weight

TO be under weight often proves low fighting-power in the body. It often means you are minus nerve power, minus red-cells in your blood, minus health, minus vitality. It is serious to be minus, but the moment you increase the number of your red-blood-cells, you begin to become plus.

That's why S.S.S., since 1876, has meant to thousands of underweight men and women, plus in their strength. Your body fills to the point of power, your flesh becomes firmer, the age lines that come from thinness disappear. You look younger, firmer, happier, and you feel it, too, all over your body. More red-blood-cells! S.S.S. will build them.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

"The House of Quality"

ODDS AND ENDS
AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

The Methodists of America are trying to unite. How many people know that the Methodist Church, the greatest Protestant body in America in numbers, divided away back in 1845, 16 years before the Civil War, over the question of slavery?

The Southern Methodists defended the Christianity of slavery. The Northern Methodists denounced it. Today no Northern Methodist clergyman, unaware of the early history of his church, would for a moment believe that Methodist clergymen in nearly half of the country ever could have defended slavery as a Christian institution.

Such is the weakness of humanity. Such is human disposition to err. Such is our inability to apply abstract principles to our own selfish interests justly and disinterestedly.

There is a big lesson to be learned from this ancient split of a church. Over what seems to us now so obvious and flagrant and atrocious a wrong as slavery.

Southern clergymen, had they been Northern, would have been as firm against slavery as the Northern clergymen. It was not that the South produced less worthy men, but that the attack of selfish interests upon the armor of principle is often too powerful to be resisted.

The number of casualties of the world war who are drawing pensions is estimated at 10,000,000 in a report communicated by the International Labor Bureau to a conference of experts being held to study methods of placing all these men at work.

Details given by several countries make a total of 7,124,000 and the balance is accounted for by those countries which did not submit figures.

Germany has 1,537,000 pensioned men; Australia, 76,000; Austria, 161,000; Belgium, 50,000; Canada, 45,000; United States, 157,000; Finland, 10,000; France, 1,500,000; Great Britain, 1,170,000; Italy, 800,000; Poland, 320,000; Rumania, 100,000; Yugoslavia, 164,000; Russia, 775,000; Czechoslovakia, 239,000; and New Zealand, 20,000.

Those Canadian neighbors of ours do not appreciate Gov. Denehy's Democratic simplicity and are about to take the necessary steps to run out of their country the Governor's "life term" fellow citizens.

The death of President Harding came as a shock to all American citizens. But in the receipt of the news was once again demonstrated the safe and sane level-headedness of our citizenry. No excitement, no flurry. Simply universal sympathy for his family and general sadness at the sudden taking of the head of this great nation. Vice President Coolidge has already assumed the duties of the President, once more demonstrating what a small part even those in the seats of the high and mighty play in the drama of present-day life. Truly are the ways of the Almighty, as they work out in American life, inscrutable. And it is even so.

Over the broiling stretches, up the gruelling hills you go. Hours without let-up your motor throbs and churns. The oil gets HOT.

At such stages your motor needs the higher-heat-resisting, longer-lasting motor oil recently perfected by Atlantic engineers.

Its greater body-holding stability completely safeguards your motor's cylinders, pistons and bearings against the extra-severe stress and strain due to the longer runs and heavier mileage that summer naturally brings.

Use Atlantic. Absolutely dependable! Easy to buy. Thousands of places where it is sold—in bulk and in cans.

The "calm man" is dead.

The man who never crossed the threshold of a bridge until he was sure it would carry the burden.

The man who took the throttle of the engine of government when the rails were broken, the signals twisted, commerce demoralized and the people distrustful and by sheer force of executive ability and lovable character brought the train into the terminal at the end of the run "on schedule."

How did he do it?

He was a man's man, entirely human, with human weaknesses, human qualities, human desires. Let us not mistake this.

He loved the association of men and was a royal host. Methodical and efficient in business, and having an alert mind, he had plenty of time for play which in the daytime was golf and when possible, social affairs in the evening. Perhaps his greatest enjoyment was with men associates and we are told that many a happy evening has been spent in shirt sleeves, pipe in mouth, cards in hand and a small stake in the pot in a purely social game. Yes, and he took real enjoyment in moderate use of liquor which was ever in his household. This he never denied, neither did he boast of it; no attempt at deception.

These were the outward signs. Looking deeper we have but to peruse his record of kind deeds, his cheery disposition and his all-abiding belief in the brotherhood of man and the wisdom of Almighty God. He was outspoken and militant on matters of morality and patriotism. His last prepared speech which was read only yesterday on the eve of his death to the Knight Templars gives a wonderful insight into the man's makeup. It is typical of all his speeches and is well worth reprinting here. We quote a few paragraphs as follows:

"Someone has said we need less of religion and more of Christianity. This may be crudely expressed, but it contains great truth. Perhaps I will best express my thought if I say we need less of sectarianism, less of denominationalism, less of fanatical zeal and its exactions, and more of the Christ spirit, more of the Christ practice and a new and abiding consecration to reverence of God.

"I am a confirmed optimist as to the growth of brotherhood."

"Because I am holding temporarily a position of official prominence I have been privileged in being invited into association with many of our so-called secret, fraternal societies. I find that each of them has as its foundation and the reason for its existence the furtherance of brotherhood and the Christian virtues of charity, mercy, justice and brotherly love. Moreover, the practice of these virtues has been suggested by the ways of happiness in the daily lives of men.

"For example—and I am sure it will be no breach of faith to relate it—I was admitted into a fraternity of Alaskan pioneers and I was obligated never to kick a dog or to work a horse with a sore back or shoulder.

"Now that was a simple thing that Christ Himself would have urged; it was an expression of mercy and affection by these pioneers for the brutes who could not speak or protest, of considerate concern for a life of service."

Red Flag Pulled Down and Burned

Police allowed an I. W. W. red flag to wave opposite the docks at Hoboken, N. J. It remained there two days, many citizens indignant because the Stars and Stripes were not flown alongside. Then a group of workmen took affairs into their own hands. They pulled down the red flag, tore it to shreds and burned it above. The flag is being torn up.

Coal Waste in Uncovered Pipes.
It is estimated that a ton of coal a year is wasted by each un-insulated hot-water tank in use in American homes. Greater economy is possible if all hot water and hot air pipes be insulated, preventing about four fifths of this loss.

Progress Editorial For Women

"DON'T FREEZE THAT WAY."

By Florence Davies.

Who doesn't remember the old taunt of childhood, "If you don't look out your face will freeze that way?"

Utterly silly, as so many of the sayings of childhood were, it was a homely threat that was hurled at the pouting child of the young cut-up who was making faces.

Even the children never took the threat very seriously. But when the old warning was a good deal exaggerated, it had a grain of truth in it. Muscles and minds do get set from constant practice in one direction.

The chances are, for instance, that Eva Tanguay really doesn't "care" by this time. No one could say so since, "I don't care" as often as she has done without really beginning not to care.

A good many people start out with a pose which they think is clever or smart, but which they don't really mean. But if they keep it up long enough it gets to be part of them.

You all know the girl who starts out by putting on a few innocent airs. She thinks it's impressive to be left and exclusive. But if she keeps it up, thirty finds her an insufferable snob and a terrible bore. She has ceased to be real.

But of all the poses, perhaps the most destructive is the pose of cynicism.

There's a reporter named Barry for instance,—Barry the picturesque and cynical. He decided years ago that life was a total loss, that nothing mattered, that he was superior to the things that appealed to ordinary people. At an unfortunate marriage which was soon called, twice. Lin once and for all that all women were false, love was a delusion and no real effort was worth while.

Barry probably thought the pose would last first. But now he has kept it up so long that it has become a part of him, with the result that Barry's usefulness is cut in two.

No one would ask him to do anything that took any real effort. No one would risk his sneer.

The young man says a little afraid of cynicism, afraid that they will be in a position to do something at all. And they are as much afraid of them, a haggard indifference.

That's a dangerous pose to put on. The world has no time for people who don't believe in it. If you want something done who would ask to do it? Someone who is offed at the undertaking or someone who was on fire with enthusiasm? We smile a little at the cynic's pose, but when we want something done we like to call on them.

There's enough hardness in life without cultivating it, enough dullness and lethargy. People who are people who believe in what they are doing and who aren't in the least ashamed of it. So if you must assume a pose, don't let that do-it-care-a-hang pose be the one to "freeze that way", as children used to say.

TIGHT TUBERCULOSIS IN STEUBEN COUNTY

New York Community Leads
in Eradication of Disease.According to a report from the United States Department of Agriculture, Steuben county, New York, now leads the country in the eradication of tuberculosis from its dairy herds, having more cattle under supervision
than any other county in the United States.The county farm bureau began the eradication work two years ago with
the employment of a single veterinarian whose services were paid for by local dairymen. The dairy farmers of the county became interested in the work and launched a county-wide campaign to rid their herds of the disease.erminally shipped by the State and national departments of animal industry tested 45,000 head of cattle. To follow up the work and make it permanent the Steuben county supervisors appropriated funds to employ a full-time veterinarian. Subsequent tests that have been made have materially increased the total of herds
under supervision.It is estimated that as a result of the bovine tuberculosis eradication,
cattle values have increased about $5
a head in the county. The county farm bureau reports that since the campaign a large number of cattle shipments have been made outside the county. "Certified and Grade A milk
producers in the environs of large
Eastern cities are coming to Steuben county to buy their milkers," says a statement from the farm bureau.Recently the state federation appointed a tuberculosis committee composed of H. E. Babcock, member of the legislative committee on the Na-tional Live Stock association, L. A.
Toan, president of the State Guernsey
Breeders' club; E. R. Zimmer, secretary of the State Holstein-Friesian association; M. E. Buckley of the Lincoln School of Agriculture, Westchester county, New York; and Jay Coryell,
state leader of farm bureaus. This committee is investigating the accredited herd plan as it is administered in the various counties of New York state with a view to formulating a permanent policy which will be acceptable to the dairymen of the state.
The New York state legislature has
been asked to appropriate about $2, 000,000 to pay indemnities owed dairymen on cattle slaughtered under the accredited herd plan and a sufficient sum in addition to carry on the work efficiently during the coming year.

The Little Corporal Matroses.
Napoleon was master of Paris and an excellent, but he was not quite master of the students of Paris, who were like other students all over the town. In 1810 at the Odeon when Lemercier's "Christopher Colomb" was being played, the Quarter Latin students raised riots during the first two performances to allow their dissatisfaction of the fact that the unties of time and place were disregarded. Whereupon the emperor, with whom Lemercier was a favorite, announced that he would attend the third performance and severely punish anyone raising a disturbance. He carried out his intention, and all went smoothly until the third act, whereupon some was changed to the deck of a lumber ship. When the curtain about three-quarters of the audience, doctored nightcaps, shut their eyes, and fell (apparently) asleep. This could easily be seen by Napoleon laughing, as his watch was observed.

The Little Corporal Matroses.
Napoleon was master of Paris and an excellent, but he was not quite master of the students of Paris, who were like other students all over the town. In 1810 at the Odeon when Lemercier's "Christopher Colomb" was being played, the Quarter Latin students raised riots during the first two performances to allow their dissatisfaction of the fact that the unties of time and place were disregarded. Whereupon the emperor, with whom Lemercier was a favorite, announced that he would attend the third performance and severely punish anyone raising a disturbance. He carried out his intention, and all went smoothly until the third act, whereupon some was changed to the deck of a lumber ship. When the curtain about three-quarters of the audience, doctored nightcaps, shut their eyes, and fell (apparently) asleep. This could easily be seen by Napoleon laughing, as his watch was observed.

PLAN COMMODITY MARKETING
Approval Has Been Given by Board of Directors of Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

Approval of plans to develop commodity marketing sections of the farm bureaus in township, county and state, has been given by the board of directors of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation. Under this plan county commodity associations of wool growers, live-stock producers, and others will become a section of the farm bureau organization. This system, according to the board, will prevent duplication of organizations. It will allow the financing of single agencies for the maintaining of services necessary to cooperative marketing associations to serve various organizations for handling specific products. The Ohio board has also appointed a special committee to work on plans for commodity associations who wish to come under the new co-operative law which will soon become operative in that state.

Nation Mourns Death Of President

A moment before, Dr. Sawyer, noting that his patient seemed to be in the same condition as had continued all day, passed towards his own room. Mrs. Harding's cry brought him back but it was too late then for science or any mortal help to bring back that which had gone winging into the sunset.

Prepared for Death

Marion, Ohio, Aug. 3.—"President Harding had a premonition of death," Dr. George T. Harding, Jr., his brother said today.

"Warren evidently sensed danger," Dr. Harding said. "The President's last cited the sale of the Marion Star, the purchase of the old De Koon homes and in Morrow county the making of a new will shortly before the Western trip started as evidence that the President was concerned about his health and was getting his affairs in order."

Mrs. Harding Brave

San Francisco, Cal., Palace Hotel—Aug. 3.—Mrs. Harding, no longer the first lady of the land, but just a bereaved woman today is the bravest and strongest member of the grief stricken party of those who accompanied President Harding on the trip that ended in his death. She is facing the fact of the President's death with "heroism." A statement given out from the Harding suite today stated she had faced it that way from the moment when she knew her husband was dead.

There has not been a moment since Mr. Harding became ill that Mrs. Harding has shown the slightest sign of weakness either of body or spirit; Doctor Sawyer said this morning.

"She is magnificent," he said. "She always has been a wonderful woman to meet an emergency. You can always count on her. He overcame quick from the crushing shock of Mr. Harding's death, Mrs. Harding took control of herself and of the situation in the death chamber last night. She gently directed when others were stunned to move. At 1:00 a. m. she was persuaded to retire and the nurse slept 'fitfully.' No one will ever know the inner story of those hours between 1:00 a. m. and dawn. She was alone then with her grief. There was nothing more to be done, nobody to be looked after any longer."

At the Mercy of Youth

On a recent note on James Russell Lowell's conception of "unbearable childhood" this is a correspondent to send us the following quotation from the letters of a little girl: "Although an angelic child as I was once described in my letters I am the youngest being living that I know, in my curiosity and my eagerness and my imagination and my desire to help and my belief in goodness and justice."

Managing a Fortune.

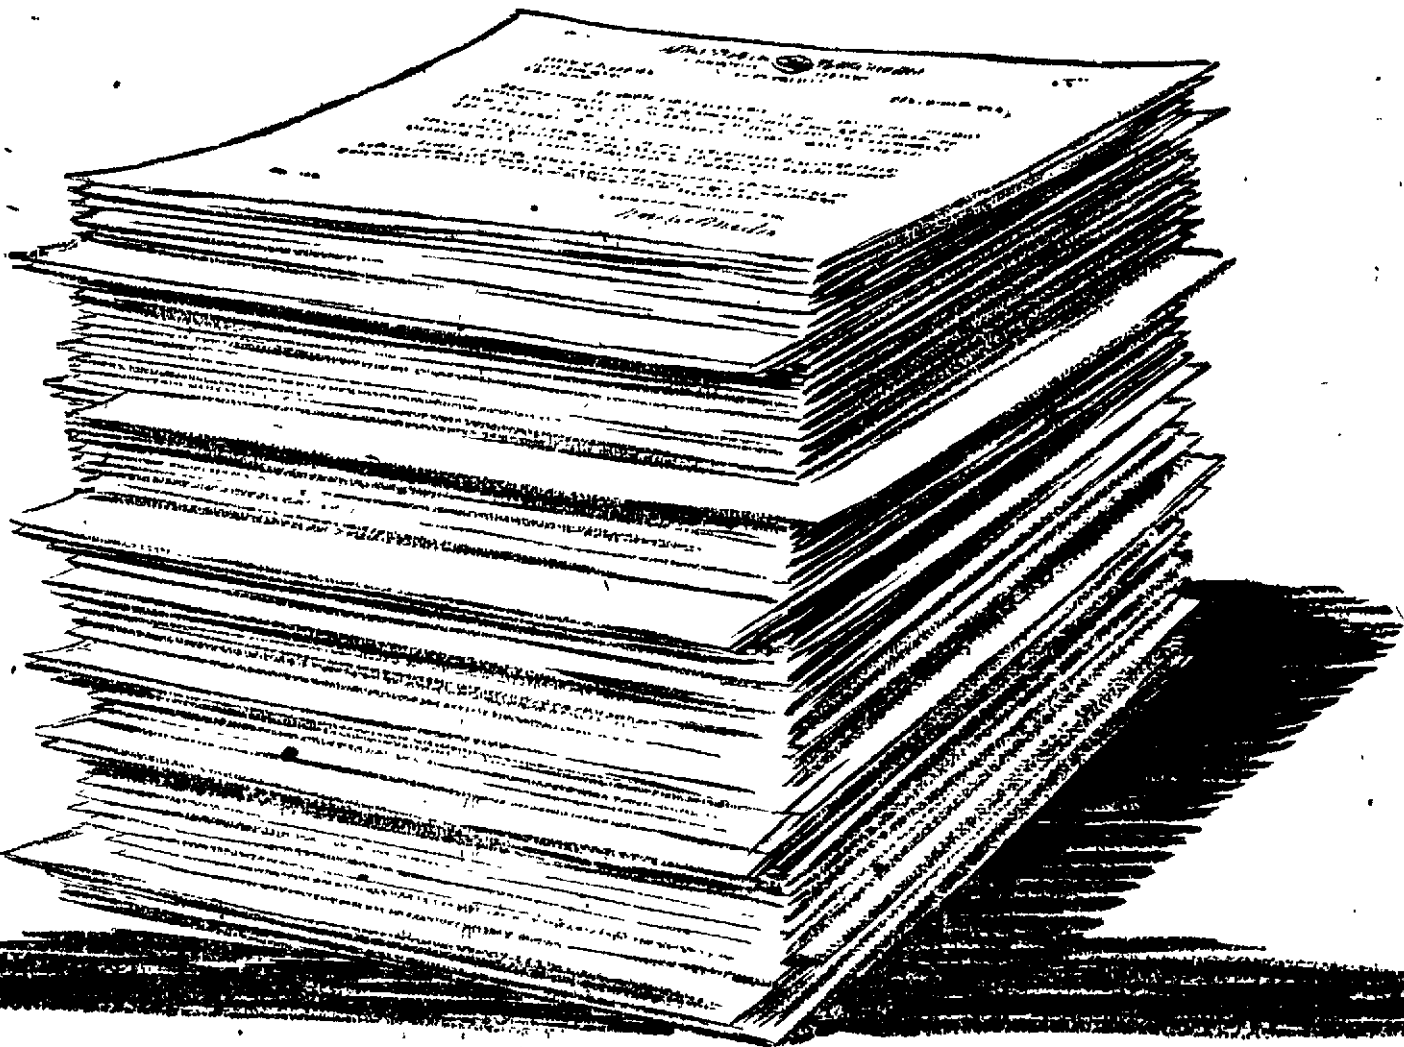

We should manage our fortune like our constitution; enjoy it when good, have patience when bad, and never apply violent remedies but in cases of necessity. Both fatal.

His Nurse

Miss Ruth Powderly, lady who was in attendance on President Harding. She nursed President Warren and Mrs. Harding in her recent illness.

FULL STORY OF THE LIFE OF WARREN G. HARDING

WARREN GAMALIEL HARDING was born on a farm just outside the village of Coatsien, Morrow county, Ohio, Nov. 2, 1855, in a two-room log house built by his father, G. T. Harding.

Here he spent his early days, attending the village school and doing chores on the farm which his father maintained to round out the slender income of a country physician.

Devoted to Mother, At his mother's knee Harding learned many of the principles to which he attributed his later success. His devotion to her was unlimited and when she became an invalid he never failed to have flowers sent to her every Sunday, even though he happened to be traveling in distant cities of America, or in foreign countries.

Harding grew fast but his ambitions grew faster. At the age of 14 he was six feet tall, but he was only 12 when he solemnly announced that some day he would be president of the United States.

The youngster learned rapidly. He mastered his letters in a single afternoon when he was still of the "kik and underpants" age, could memorize long poems before he was four, and was always anxious to "speak his piece" at gatherings.

Not a "Goody, Goody"

He was not of the "goody, goody" type, however. His manly qualities soon established him as the leader of his boy associates. He could swim farther and dive deeper than any of the other boys who frequented the "old swimmer's hole" in Whetstone creek, and stories are still told of his tobacco chewing prowess.

The boy Harding never sought a fight but was always ready to battle for a just cause, particularly to protect the weak from aggression.

In his 14th year "Doc" (as Harding was nicknamed) entered, as of academic grade, the Ohio Central College of Iberia, O. Here he received a B. S. degree, though sometimes forced to quit temporarily in order to earn sufficient money to continue the course.

This he did by doing odd painting and farm jobs, by driving a team on a railroad construction project, by working in a brickyard, and by working for short intervals in the village printing shop.

Edited College Paper.

Harding achieved distinction at Iberia as a student, as editor of the college paper and as a declaimer. To the college publication he gave the motto by which he ruled his life: Semper Paratus et Excelsior—Always ready to go higher. Through this sheet he first expounded his theory nopolized nearly all of her time and many ladies became very jealous. At the dinner Miss Murphy was introduced as such but when she arose to acknowledge the introduction "she" removed her wig and there stood Ross Quigley. Ross got away with his stunt in great shape.

The early hours of the afternoon were taken up in the reception of the visitors, and every member, as well as the members of the various families, were made to feel that when they came to Clearfield for a good time, it was certain they would not be disappointed.

The first portion of the program was the initiation of two members into the Clearfield club, Messrs Leavy and Ellis being the victims in this instance. The degree team known as the Rot Neg Team, but they were far from that. The principal officers were assisted by huskies from the various clubs.

The Rot Neg team was sent out to get the victims and shortly returned with one of them in a rough box and the other in a laundry basket each being typical of his business. Then the degree work was carried out. The principal work was delivered by Grant Norris of Curwensville, and he proved himself to be a pastmaster.

Then everyone adjourned to the ball game, where they saw Clearfield triumph over DuBois. During the entire afternoon, however, there was dancing and this was a feature not neglected to any extent.

At 5:30 o'clock the big dinner was

of what young men should not do to succeed.

"Some young men who think themselves gifted with genius are inclined to the kangaroo style of progressing," he wrote. "They flatter themselves that they at least may attain to the heights of fame by a series of leaps, and that without training and hard work."

Upon graduation in 1882 Harding went to Marion, Ohio, inclined to carry out his father's wish that he study law. But fate and music intervened. He joined the local band as an alto cornetist. To take trips with the band required money. Therefore Harding abandoned the study of law to teach school, which he felt would be more likely to bring immediate financial returns.

Gets Marion Star.

He continued as teacher for one year; then read law for a year, selling insurance to pay expenses.

Came the day when the Marion Star, a paper which had failed, was offered at sheriff's sale for $300. Dr. Harding bought it and presented it to his son. Thus, before he was 18, Harding became publisher and staff of a country paper.

Harding now made his first active plunge into politics, seeking no office for himself, but boosting Republican policies so strenuously and courageously that, before he was 21, he was a power in town and county councils of the party.

The young editor struggled hard to keep the Star going and succeeded until he made a trip to the Republican national convention, to cheer for Blaine. The trip was expensive and when he returned he was forced to sell out.

Becomes a Reporter.

Harding obtained a job as reporter on the Marion Mirror, his enthusiasm for success and Blaine unabated. The first might have carried him far as a reporter had not the latter been so strong. The Mirror was a Democratic sheet and pro-Blaine utterances which Harding managed to slip into it caused the loss of his position.

Harding then determined to repurchase the Marion Star. He did so in partnership with "Jack" Warwick, a newspaperman and friend. They changed the Star from an independent to a staunch Republican paper—and this in a Democratic stronghold.

With the paper as likely to be a liability as an asset on the morrow, Harding courted and won the favor of Miss Florence Kling. But Father Amos Kling could see no future for the young newspaper editor and threatened to cut his daughter off without a dollar, should she marry Harding.

served by the ladies of Class No. 10 of the West Side M. E. church. This dinner was in most competent hands, and proved to be a great delight to those whose appetite was sharpened by the ride. It was during the meal that the real fun of the afternoon was enjoyed, as well as some more serious stuff. President Stewart presided, and barring occasional tilts with the "head waiter" got along famously. This "waiter" by the way, had a habit of shoving himself into all sorts of situations, quarrelling with Tim Allen, Doc Free and several others. His antics were highly amusing and it later developed that he was the well known entertainer Luke Barnett, of Pittsburgh. His touch to the program of enjoy-

Married in 1891.

Harding unabashed, built a house for his bride-to-be and they were married in it, July 8, 1891. Father Kling kept his word and it was many years before he would so much as speak to his son-in-law.

Mrs. Harding immediately set herself to aiding in her husband's work. She managed the business end while he devoted himself to the editorial department.

The Star now started on a rapid journey to success. Much of this success was due, according to its daughter, to the fact that his employer acted with him rather than for him. The paper was never any size but it was at his plant; he was the personal friend of every man on the staff.

Harding took a keen interest in Marion. He boosted for it, contentedly and was instrumental in bringing many new enterprises to it. In many of these he took stock and became director. He was also trustee of the Baptist church, which he attended.

Harding's home became famous for its hospitality.

Elected State Senator.

Meantime Harding's power in politics grew rapidly, but it was not until 1890 that he sought office. In this year he was elected state senator, from the Thirtieth Senatorial District of Ohio. He was re-elected and became Republican leader in the senate.

His terms in the senate were followed by his election to the lieutenant-governorship in 1903. In 1910 he ran for governor but was defeated.

Harding made the speech nominating William Howard Taft for president at the Republican National Convention in 1912. In 1914 he was elected U. S. Senator from Ohio, and in 1916 was temporary chairman of the national convention, and delivered the keynote speech.

He was generally found in opposition to the Wilson administration during his first senate session, but became a staunch advocate of its measures in war time. After the Paris peace conference he again became a severe critic of Wilsonian policies.

Becomes President.

Harding was nominated for the presidency on the Republican ticket June 12, 1920, at the Chicago convention, being a compromise candidate when the leaders became deadlocked. This honor came to him on his father's birthday.

He made his campaign on an anti-League of Nations platform and was elected president by an overwhelming landslide which even denied the "solid South." Nov. 2, 1920, his 55th birthday. He took the oath of office and became the 29th president of the United States, March 4, 1921.

ment was a pleasure to every one. During the dinner President Stewart called upon Ward Fleming, president of Philipsburg club; T. T. Allen of DuBois club; Doctor Free, of DuBois and several others. All responded briefly.

An entertaining feature of the afternoon was the appearance of Powell Weaver, a nationally known pipe organist. Lacking a pipe organ on which to play Mr. Powell did a piano-forte, playing several appreciated numbers.

Another very notable feature was the appearance of Miss Mary Mitchell of Clearfield a singer to whom it is always a pleasure to listen. Miss Mitchell sang "The Last Rose of

MRS. WARREN G. HARDING

Summer" and "The Rosary," with a depth of expression that was highly delightful.

And it was during the meal that a quartet of solo players, attired as an international aggregation, made its appearance, and played a number of selections. They were received vociferously.

Following the program in the auditorium, the crowd went to the outside where a concert by the American Legion band, under the direction of Harry Bridge, was heartily enjoyed. The American Legion band is an aggregation that has attained a splendid reputation for fine playing, and they richly deserved all of the hearty words of commendation given them.

It was a splendid outing in every sense of the word and truly enjoyed by every member present.

The Wedding Route.

It is reported that the "latest thing" in wedding invitations is an engraving map showing the way to the church and to the house. Grinding perplexity is the mother of innovations. It is not so stated, but unquestionably this helpful scheme originated in Boston, where wedding guests have been known to lose themselves and wander around for hours through the tangled highways, not reaching the scene of the festival until the rice and old shoes had been thrown and everyone else was on the way home.—Providence Journal

GOOD WOMAN CALLED TO HER REWARD

Mrs. Mary E. Chase Kline, wife of L. A. Kline, who has been in a serious condition for several weeks, passed away at the family home on Locust street, Thursday afternoon at 3:45 o'clock. Mrs. Kline had been suffering from kidney trouble for some time and death was due to uræmic poisoning.

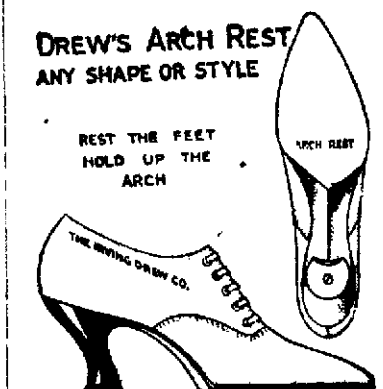

The deceased was a daughter of the late John M. and Tabitha Chase and was born at the Chase homestead to Woodward township in May 28th, 1861, being therefore in her 62nd year. She was a devoted Christian, a life-long member of the Baptist church and was devoted to her home and loved ones, and her death will bring sadness to a large circle of friends.

Mrs. Kline is survived by her husband and the following children: Jesse B., of Conneville, Pa.; Mrs. Edna L. Stage, Austin A. and Clair D., of Clearfield; and Mrs. Charles E. Hipsy, of Durbin, W. Va.; Orin J. John M., Tabitha and an infant son preceded their mother to the grave. Nine grand children and the following brothers and sisters also survive her: John M. Chase, Jr.; Mrs. C. B. Hoover, Mrs. E. Kate Moore, Joseph R. and Benjamin F. Chase.

The funeral will be held from the Kline home Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made in Hillcrest cemetery.

Just What She Wanted.

There was a shriek and a splash, followed by another splash immediately afterward, as the would-be rescuer swam to where the lady had disappeared under the water. He caught her as she struggled to the surface and sought to calm her. "Don't struggle, madam," he spluttered. "We are quite safe; the lake is quite calm and as clear as a mirror and—" "Well, let go my arms, then," said the now comforted lady, "and let me look into it. I think my bath is coming down."

Roman Soldiers' "Smokes." Records recently discovered show that the Roman soldiers in Caesar's time had their pipes. Of course they knew nothing about real tobacco, as that had not at that period been discovered. However, they did have pipes and they smoked lavender and hemp, and from all accounts they liked it and it served almost the same purpose. In fact, it is said to have been a great solace and stimulant to the soldiers.

Curwensville's Own Column

The ladies auxiliary of the American Legion at Curwensville, expect within the next few weeks, to stage a grand lawn fete at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Irwin, River street, the purpose of which is to raise a fund for the erection of a soldier's monument to be dedicated to the memory of the Civil and Spanish American war veterans. There will be dancing, refreshments and cake on the lawn, and arrangements will be made for the best of the present will have a good time. As this fund is for a war case, it should be the aim of every man, woman and child residing in this patriotic community to assist the auxiliary ladies in their effort by their presence and patronage.

Joe Ward, whom many Curwensville people will remember as a barefooted kid running amuck some thirty years ago, was in town yesterday for a few hours, accompanied by his two manly sons and a son-in-law. Ward is now a staid citizen of Erie Pa., where he has made a good home and has been steadily employed by one firm for most twenty years back. His mother was a daughter of Joseph White who at one time was listed as a famous four horse stage driver over the old Erie Pike some sixty years ago.

Miss Alice Harley went to Harrisburg the fore part of this week to attend the funeral of John C. Gates, who had died very suddenly at his home near that city. During her absence the Harley home will be closed. Mrs. Kate Mitchell remaining in Clearfield with friends.

Misses Irene and Margaret Brownley arrived at the home of their aunt, Mrs. Edna Way from their home at Monhall, Pa., Wednesday and expect to visit for several weeks. Their mother who has been here for several weeks left Tuesday for her home.

A great picture, the 'Arabian Nights,' under the auspices of Rhoda Rebecca lodge, I. O. O. F., will be shown in Curwensville on the night of the 15th. Each admission ticket entitles the holder to a share in the distribution of a grand Maxwell car, sport model, the winner being the one who holds the successful number as drawn by lot. The ladies have adopted this means of raising a sum of money which they have pledged for a good cause and no one should hesitate in purchasing a ticket to see this wonderful picture. It is worth more than the price paid for an admission ticket.

Nature plays some funny pranks. Yesterday Mrs. Harry Bilger went into the cellar for some potatoes which had been lying on the dirt floor. Great was her surprise to discover that from the sprouts on the old potato new potatoes had grown, some as large as a tea cup. She secured a sufficient number of the new ones for a dinner of four. She presented us with an old timer which bore four new fellows of good size. You need not take our word for this astounding story, as all you have to do is to look in the front window at the Fleming cigar store.

Jealous Spaniards Hid Wives.
The so-called Venetian blinds first came to Venice from Spain, where they were called "jealousies." The jealous Spanish husband kept his wife in seclusion. She was not allowed to draw up her blinds, but she might peep out through the slits between the blinds.

"Austin again in toils." This more or less stock phrase is again brought out and dusted off. The prisoner this time, however, is not Austin, but his wife, Alberta. She was arrested Wednesday by Officer Daniel Brin, after she had disobeyed the terms of her parole, which forced her to leave Phillipsburg within a stated time limit, that limit having expired finding her still in the town. It has become so customary for either Austin or his wife or both to be apprehended by the law that in one newspaper it was suggested as a type and time saver that the stock head, "Austin Again Arrested," be kept and used when one or both were again collared by the long arm of the law. Their many law breaking activities had kept them before one justice or another most of the time for many moons, until Austin was arrested and convicted of anti-Volstead and Mrs. Austin was paroled on the conditions mentioned. Her re-arrest followed her refusal to meet the conditions set forth by the judge.

A profit of $1 a ton on cotton seed, and savings of $5.25 a ton on six carloads of acid phosphate and $15 to $18 a ton on three carloads of nitrate of soda for the last few months is the record in dollars and cents gained by farmers of Webster parish, Louisiana, who are members of the parish farm bureau according to L. THE HUSKY KIDDIES DRINK OUR MILK

Look over the husky kiddies around your neighborhood. If they are bottle fed kiddies, nine out of every ten of them are walking advertisements for the goodness of our milk.

When your family physician tells you how to modify the milk for the best feedings and then tells you how to strengthen the mixture to keep pace with the growth of the youngster, the youngster begins to wax stronger and fatter as he goes along.

And another thing. The youngsters fed with our milk have less bowel trouble during the summer months and are less liable to sickness because our milk has gone through the pasteurization process.

Nation Mourns Death Of President Warren G. Harding

WARREN G. HARDING

CONDENSED LIFE STORY OF WARREN G. HARDING

Warren Gamaliel Harding was born near the village of Corsica, O., Nov. 2, 1865.

His father, Dr. G. T. Harding, was a country physician who added to his income by conducting a small farm. His mother was formerly Miss Phoebe Elizabeth Dickerson.

Warren, the eldest of eight children, attended the village school, and in his fourth year entered the Ohio Central College, in Iberia, O. He graduated with a B. S. degree in 1882, and taught school for a year, read law for another year and then was given the ownership of the Marion (Ohio) Star, by his father.

He became owner of the Star, and, with the assistance of his wife, formerly Miss Florence Elizabeth Kling, whom he married in 1891, made it highly successful.

Harding first held public office in 1900 when he became state senator. He held this office until 1904 when he took office as lieutenant governor of Ohio. In 1910 he ran for governor but was defeated.

From this time Harding rose rapidly in the councils of the G. O. P., and made the speech nominating William Howard Taft for president at the Chicago convention in 1912.

Senator-President.

In 1914 Harding was elected U. S. senator from Ohio and was temporary chairman of the Republican convention in 1916.

He remained in the Senate until he was nominated for president on the Republican ticket in 1920. He was elected the 29th president of the United States Nov. 2, 1920, on his 55th birthday, and took office March 4, 1921.

SHERIFF DUKEMAN'S DAUGHTER PREVENTS DELIVERY FROM JAIL

Bellefonte, Pa., Aug. 2.—Only the bravery of Miss Marion Dukeman, serving as deputy sheriff under her father, Harry Dukeman, as well as the assistance of her mother, prevented a well-planned and daring jail delivery here at noon today. Miss Dukeman and two trustees, Timpani Carpellia and George Farbay, were taking in the prisoners' dinner. As the trustees passed through the doorway Clair Johnson of New Castle, one of the three men who recently broke away from the Rockview Penitentiary and refuses to plead guilty to the crime, jumped from the bathroom and attacked Miss Dukeman.

He pushed her into the corridor, but she grabbed his arm and held to it, screaming for help. Meanwhile, two other prisoners attacked the trustees, but Mrs. Dukeman locked the jail door and kept them from getting out. Sheriff Dukeman had just returned

Our innate modesty prevents our writing a fitting preface to the Rotary Club Outing held at the Driving Park yesterday afternoon but Bill Ross of The DuBois Courier puts it this way:

"The big Rotary club gathering at Clearfield yesterday, participated in by the clubs Phillipsburg, Clearfield and DuBois, was an unqualified success in every particular, there being a large gathering from all three organizations. The Clearfield club, through its president Albert Stewart and the various committees, had arranged a program that was interesting from start to finish.

Albert Bigler, head of the Entertainment Committee, had as his assistant Miss Murphy, his personal guest, who proved very charming to the Rotarians as they arrived but her propensity for becoming ill led many into embarrassing situations. A demure, dainty bit of a miss, she aroused slumbering sentimental desires for "service above self" in the bosoms of all who made her acquaintance. During the early part of the afternoon Frank B. Reed and John Woods mo-

Sudden Stroke Of Apoplexy Ends Life As Devoted Wife Reads Him The Daily News

No Time For Farewells—Only Wife And Head Nurse Were Present When The End Came—Mrs. Harding Brave—She Does Not Break Down Under Her Experience.

DEATH A BIG SURPRISE TO PHYSICIANS

THE PRESIDENT IS DEAD.

Death, apparently blocked by medical science, struck suddenly and without warning at 7:30 last night.

The President was definitely on the road to recovery from ptomaine poisoning, acute indigestion and pneumonic infection, which followed them.

DEATH INSTANTANEOUS.

But death found a way through the armor. It struck into the brain with apoplexy and without struggle or word and only a shudder of his weakened frame and the raising of one hand, the nation's head passed beyond.

Tonight they will take Warren G. Harding's body home—back to the White House, where he lived and worked as the Chief Magistrate of the people, who today, shocked beyond expression by his death, mourn for him and with his wife. After the simplest private funeral services in the Presidential suite at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, where he took his bed last Sunday morning, the President's remains will be placed aboard a special train, which will leave San Francisco at 7:00 p. m. for Washington.

He will be laid to rest in his old home town, Marion, Ohio, the country village which he raised from rural obscurity into national prominence. Before the final obsequies, which will mark his burial, the President's body will lie in state in Washington.

DIED AS WIFE READ TO HIM.

The President passed with the sunset. The last rays of California's golden sunshine was pouring into his room where Mrs. Harding sat reading to him from a magazine. Dr. Sawyer, his old friend and personal physician, sat beside him. The President was lying very still listening to Mrs. Harding read. He seemed to be resting quite comfortably to the watchful eyes of his two nurses, Miss Ruth Powderly and Miss Sue Dausser. He seemed just as he had been all day—comfortable and in better physical condition than at any time since he became ill. There was no apprehension of impending tragedy to any there. Mrs. Harding and the nurses had every reason to feel easier about the condition of the President than at any moment since illness overtook him. They were looking forward without fear or anxiety to the night, another night they believed when the restorative power of sleep would add a little more to the slowly growing strength of the President.

It was a scene of peaceful quiet and contentment. Mrs. Harding read on. She came to the end of a paragraph and paused. She turned to look at her husband.

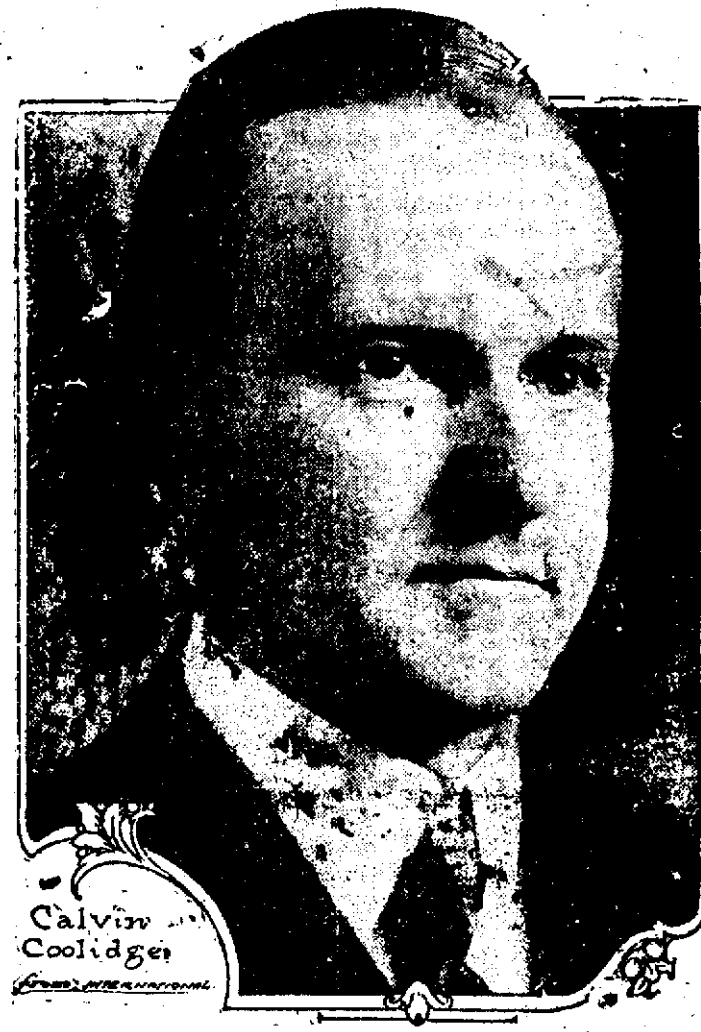

SPOKE JUST BEFORE DEATH.

"That sounds good," said Mr. Harding. Mrs. Harding turned again to the magazine and read.

She had not finished a sentence when, as though some one had struck him a sudden and crushing blow, the President threw up one hand over his head convulsively. It was as though he sought to ward off the blow which death, in that peaceful, unguarded moment, had aimed with unerring directness at a vital spot. Then like a man struck by a bolt of lightning, the President stiffened and suddenly dropped back limply; in a brief second, the drawing of a breath, his spirit winged away from the weakened body.

Just in an instant, like the dropping of the sun behind the hills, his life went out. He, who a moment before had been the President of the United States, the object of the solicitude and sympathetic concern of 110,000,000 people, became a bit of clay, and millions, who through the days of his illness had swung with his wife and his close friends through the cycle of alarm, deepening fear, and back to hope, relief and practical certainty of recovery, became mourners.

FATHER BROKEN

Marion, Ohio, Aug. 3.—An aged man, his heart all but broken by the news which came like a dream in the night, lay on the couch in his East Centre street home today and mourned the loss of his boy.

For to Dr. George T. Harding, eighty years old, the first man to see his son sworn in as President of the United States the death of Warren G. Harding was a grief personally as well as a national tragedy. Attendants said the aged physician was nearly broken down. Informed by newspaper men shortly before midnight of his son's death, Doctor Harding sank to his bed mumbling to comfort him in his grief, the doctor said:

"Boys this is terrible. My Warren is gone."

A few minutes later after a group of close friends had gathered at the Harding home to comfort him in his grief, the doctor said:

"Warren had the interest of his country at heart. There never has been a President since Abraham Lincoln who has had the interest of the country at heart like Warren."

POWELL WEAVER RECITAL TONIGHT

The organ recital to be given by Powell Weaver, noted concert organist, in Trinity Methodist church this evening under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Clearfield hospital, will be well worth attending. The excellent program to be rendered was printed in this paper last evening and is being class throughout.

Everybody is invited. No admission fee will be charged but an offering will be taken and the proceeds applied to the Elevator Fund at the hospital.

Mrs. George Morrison had her leg broken at her home on William street last evening.

COMMENT FROM MANY QUARTERS OF THE GLOBE

Wilson Wires Mrs. Harding
Washington, D. C. Aug. 3.—Woodrow Wilson today dispatched a message of sympathy to the widow of President Harding. An army of reporters besieged the Wilson home in S. Street in an effort to secure a public statement on the death of President Harding but Mr. Wilson chose to send his word of condolence direct to Mrs. Harding. His message was not made public here.

Word of the passing of President Harding was given to Mr. Wilson early today. An effort made by Mrs. Wilson to keep the news from him until he arose this morning was unsuccessful.

Poincare's Statement
Paris, Aug. 3.—"The death of President Harding at the present time is a world disaster, which may have wide effect on the present status of world affairs, Premier Poincare said.

"I am deeply grieved and shocked. France is especially sorrowful owing to the President's attitude toward France's problems."

From Lloyd George
London, Aug. 3.—"The death of President Harding adds one more complication to a world already tangled with trouble," former Premier Lloyd George said today.

TO VISIT GRAMPIAN
DuBois business men will take advantage of the opening of the new concrete road and will make up a big motor party to visit the "capital" of Penn township on Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Four hundred automobiles are expected. Mayor Haag is issuing a proclamation asking all the business men to participate in the trip.

Grampian people would like to have Clearfield people participate in the celebration, President of Council Miles Woodie asking The Progress to make that statement.

COOLIDGE TAKES OATH BY LIGHT OF AN OIL LAMP

Aged Father, a Notary Public, Administers Oath With Only Members of Family Present.

AT 2:47 THIS A. M.

Plymouth, Vt., Aug. 3.—By the dim flickering oil lamp Calvin Coolidge took the oath of President of the United States at 2:47 a. m. today. He started for Washington at 7:27 a. m.

Just a few hours after word of the death of Warren G. Harding had roused him from his bed, Coolidge stood in the old parlor of the family farm house in this isolated hamlet, deep in the Vermont mountains, and was sworn in by his aged father, John Coolidge, who is a notary public.

Other Presidents have taken the oath on a high rostrum before the capitol at Washington with the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court administering it, with the troops drawn up in array, with flags and bands and with vast cheering crowds to witness.

A Solemn Scene.
Calvin Coolidge was inaugurated in a small room just across the road from the house where he was born, in the early hours of the morning with his old father—unshaven and colorless—handing him a well thumbed family Bible in the presence of his wife, a chauffeur, Congressman Dale, L. L. Lane, president of the Railway Mail Association of New England, and Secretary Trevisser of his Washington office.

These were all that witnessed the solemn, simple ceremony, made all the more solemn by the knowledge that death had just taken his predecessor with shocking suddenness. There was no music save the lonesome chirping of crickets outside, no acclaim save the whispers of a few of the neighbors who gathered outside the house.

The decision to take the oath it once came after receipt of a telegram from Attorney General Daugherty from San Francisco, urging such a course. There were no preliminaries. The witnesses gathered in the parlor, which during the years had been the scene of many events, big in the history of the Coolidge family, but which had never been thought of for the setting for such an event as the inauguration of the thirtieth President of the United States.

Faith in God.

"Reports have reached me which I fear are correct, that President Harding has gone. The world has lost a great and good man. I mourn his loss. He was my Chief and my friend. It will be my purpose to carry out the policies which he had begun for the service of the American people. For this purpose I shall seek the cooperation of all those who have been associated with the President during his term of office. Those who have given their efforts to assist him I wish to remain in office that they may assist me. I have faith that God will direct the destinies of our nation."

WITMER PARK PICNIC

The Witmer Park playground moved to the Peewees West Wednesday afternoon as announced. Over thirty children and their supervisor, Miss John took the morning B. R. & P. equipped with base ball implements, bathing suits and the ever popular lunch basket. This is the first excursion of the season and with the ball game, swimming and all was a complete success. The lake scheme is not followed by many playground systems—perhaps because the grounds in many towns are inaccessible to open country, but it is a fine idea and worth following.

"The news of the President's death came as a shock to this country as we had been led to believe the crisis was passed. It is regarded by every one as a great loss for his genial, simple, straightforwardness had won for him a genuine respect and liking in this country."

Herrick's Opinion

Paris, Aug. 3.—"The President died a martyr to office," American Ambassador Myron T. Herrick declared in statement today. "He died for his country just as any soldier killed in battle. We were killed by pressure of the great responsibility of his office. The American people now must realize that the office of the President must be reorganized. We must take off some of that load of responsibility. No one can live through it."

U. S. Closes Shop

Washington, D. C. Aug. 3.—The United States Government today closes its doors out of respect to the memory of President Harding. After a conference between Secretary Hughes and Post Master General New, the only two members of the cabinet in the city Hughes issued orders closing all departments of the Government for the day.

Pinchot Acts

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 3.—Governor Pinchot today issued a proclamation setting aside Sunday, Aug. 5th as a day of prayer for the welfare of the nation and in remembrance of President Harding.

"Through his departure," the proclamation states, "the Nation has lost at the very summit of its career a Chief Magistrate whose personal qualities have endeared him to his fellow citizens and whose unexpected death has brought deep grief to all our people."

WEST SIDE PLAY

GROUND PARTY

The West Side Community play-party Friday night has been planned on a scale to take care of the entire Third Ward. Miss Evelyn Smith, the supervisor, has organized the affair to provide for all ages. All the playgrounds will send their horseshoe teams and there will be some inter-ward volley for both boys and girls. The Fourth-of-July prize cup will be on exhibition as a special attraction as it has not yet been seen in the ward that won it. Donations were most generous and all may help themselves to winners' and marshmallows to toast at the big bon fire with the complimentary roll along side. The ice cream will call for nickles but that is a small item.

This is the first community party for West Side in a long time so all are reminded that by coming they will be both giving and getting pleasure.

home from a business trip and, hearing his daughter's screams, ran to her rescue just as the burly prisoner broke from her grasp. With an iron bar he had concealed in his sleeve the infuriated prisoner attacked the Sheriff and hit him twice.

Just as he threw back to hit again, Mrs. Dukeman grabbed the iron and the Sheriff grappled with his assailant. Miss Dukeman ran to the office and came back with her father's revolver, firing one shot into the floor. She admitted later that she would have shot the prisoner if it had not been for the fear of hitting her father. The Sheriff, however, soon overpowered his man and put him behind the bars.

Tunpeo Carpella, one of the trustees, was so badly hurt he had to be sent to the hospital. The delivery was undoubtedly planned by the three convicts who escaped from the Rockview Penitentiary in June, as an examination disclosed the fact that the locks had been broken off the doors of the cells occupied by them.

How to build up your Weight

TO be under weight often proves low fighting-power in the body. It often means you are minus nerve power, minus red-cells in your blood, minus health, minus vitality. It is serious to be minus, but the moment you increase the number of your red-blood-cells, you begin to become plus.

That's why S.S.S., since 1876, has meant to thousands of underweight men and women, a plus in their strength. Your body fills to the point of power, your flesh becomes firmer, the age lines that come from thinness disappear. You look younger, firmer, happier, and you feel it, too, all over your body. More red-blood-cells! S.S.S. will build them.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

The Methodists of America are trying to unite. How many people know that the Methodist Church, the greatest Protestant body in America in numbers, divided away back in 1845, 16 years before the Civil War, over the question of slavery?

The Southern Methodists defended the Christianity of slavery. The Northern Methodists denounced it. Today no Northern Methodist clergyman, unaware of the early history of his church, would for a moment believe that Methodist clergymen in nearly half of the country ever could have defended slavery as a Christian institution.

Such is the weakness of humanity. Such is human disposition to err. Such is our inability to apply abstract principles to our own selfish interests justly and disinterestedly.

There is a big lesson to be learned from this ancient split of a church over what seems to us now so obvious and flagrant and atrocious a wrong as slavery.

Southern clergymen, had they been Northerners, would have been as firm against slavery as the Northern clergymen. It was not that the South produced less worthy men, but that the attack of selfish interests upon the armor of principle is often too powerful to be resisted.

The number of casualties of the world war who are drawing pensions is estimated at 10,000,000 in a report communicated by the International Labor Bureau to a conference of experts being held to study methods of placing all these men at work.

Details given by several countries make a total of 7,124,000 and the balance is accounted for by those countries which did not submit figures.

Germany has 1,537,000 pensioned men; Australia, 76,000; Austria, 161,000; Belgium, 50,000; Canada, 45,000; United States, 157,000; Finland, 10,000; France, 1,500,000; Great Britain, 1,170,000; Italy, 800,000; Poland, 320,000; Rumania, 100,000; Yugoslavia, 164,000; Russia, 775,000; Czechoslovakia, 239,000; and New Zealand, 20,000.

Those Canadian neighbors of ours do not appreciate Gov. Denehy's Democratic simplicity and are about to take the necessary steps to run out of their country the Governor's "life term" fellow citizens.

The death of President Harding came as a shock to all American citizens. But in the receipt of the news was once again demonstrated the safe and sane level-headedness of our citizenry. No excitement, no flurry. Simply universal sympathy for his family and general sadness at the sudden taking of the head of this great nation. Vice President Coolidge has already assumed the duties of the President, once more demonstrating what a small part even those in the seats of the high and mighty play in the drama of present-day life. Truly are the ways of the Almighty, as they work out in American life, inscrutable. And it is even so.

The "calm man" is dead.

The man who never crossed the threshold of a bridge until he was sure it would carry the burden.

The man who took the throttle of the engine of government when the rails were broken, the signals twisted, commerce demoralized and the people distrustful and by sheer force of executive ability and lovable character brought the train into the terminal at the end of the run "on schedule."

How did he do it?

He was a man's man, entirely human, with human weaknesses, human qualities, human desires. Let us not mistake this.

He loved the association of men and was a royal host. Methodical and efficient in business, and having an alert mind, he had plenty of time for play which in the daytime was golf and when possible, social affairs in the evening. Perhaps his greatest enjoyment was with men associates and we are told that many a happy evening has been spent in shirt sleeves, pipe in mouth, cards in hand and a small stake in the pot in a purely social game. Yes, and he took real enjoyment in moderate use of liquor which was ever in his household. This he never denied, neither did he boast of it; no attempt at deception.

These were the outward signs. Looking deeper we have but to peruse his record of kind deeds, his cheery disposition and his all-abiding belief in the brotherhood of man and the wisdom of Almighty God. He was outspoken and militant on matters of morality and patriotism. His last prepared speech which was read only yesterday on the eve of his death to the Knight Templars gives a wonderful insight into the man's makeup. It is typical of all his speeches and is well worth reprinting here. We quote a few paragraphs as follows:

"Someone has said we need less of religion and more of Christianity. This may be crudely expressed, but it contains great truth. Perhaps I will best express my thought if I say we need less of sectarianism, less of denominationalism, less of fanatical zeal and its exactions, and more of the Christ spirit, more of the Christ practice and a new and abiding consecration to reverence of God.

"I am a confirmed optimist as to the growth of brotherhood."

"Because I am holding temporarily a position of official prominence I have been privileged in being invited into association with many of our so-called secret, fraternal societies. I find that each of them has as its foundation and the reason for its existence the furtherance of brotherhood and the Christian virtues of charity, mercy, justice and brotherly love. Moreover, the practice of these virtues has been suggested by the ways of happiness in the daily lives of men.

"For example—and I am sure it will be no breach of faith to relate it—I was admitted into a fraternity of Alaskan pioneers and I was obligated never to kick a dog or to work a horse with a sore back or shoulder.

"Now that was a simple thing that Christ Himself would have urged; it was an expression of mercy and affection by these pioneers for the brutes who could not speak or protest, of considerate concern for a life of service."

Progress Editorial For Women

"DON'T FREEZE THAT WAY."

By Florence Davies.

Who doesn't remember the old taunt of childhood, "If you don't look out your face will freeze that way?"

Utterly silly, as so many of the sayings of childhood were, it was a homely threat that was hurled at the pouting child of the young cut-up who was making faces.

Even the children never took the threat very seriously. But when the old warning was a good deal exaggerated, it had a grain of truth in it. Muscles and minds do get set from constant practice in one direction.

The chances are, for instance, that Eva Tanguay really doesn't "care" by this time. No one could say so since, "I don't care" as often as she has done without really beginning not to care.

A good many people start out with a pose which they think is clever or smart, but which they don't really mean. But if they keep it up long enough it gets to be part of them.

You all know the girl who starts out by putting on a few innocent airs. She thinks it's impressive to be left and exclusive. But if she keeps it up, thirty finds her an insufferable snob and a terrible bore. She has ceased to be real.

But of all the poses, perhaps the most destructive is the pose of cynicism.

There's a reporter named Barry for instance,—Barry the picturesque and cynical. He decided years ago that life was a total loss, that nothing mattered, that he was superior to the things that appealed to ordinary people. At an unfortunate marriage which was soon ended, tragedy, Lin once and for all that all women were false, love was a delusion and no real life was worth while.

Barry probably thought the pose would last first. But now he has kept it up so long that it has become a part of him, with the result that Barry's usefulness is cut in two.

No one would ask him to do anything that took any real effort. No one would risk his sneer.

The young man says a little afraid of cynicism, afraid that they will be in a position to do something at all. And they are as much afraid of them, a haggard indifference. That's a dangerous pose to pose with.

The world has no time for people who don't believe in it. If you want something done who would ask to do it? Someone who is offed at the undertaking or someone who was on fire with enthusiasm? We smile a little at the cynic's pose, but when we want something done we like to call on them.

There's enough hardness in life without cultivating it, enough dullness and lethargy. People who are people who believe in what they are doing and who aren't in the least ashamed of it. So if you must assume a pose, don't let that do-it-care-a-hang pose be the one to "freeze that way", as children used to say.

TIGHT TUBERCULOSIS IN STEUBEN COUNTY

New York Community Leads
in Eradication of Disease.According to a report from the United States Department of Agriculture, Steuben county, New York, now
leads the country in the eradication of
tuberculosis from its dairy herds, having more cattle under supervision
than any other county in the United States.The county farm bureau began the eradication work two years ago with
the employment of a single veterinarian whose services were paid for
by local dairymen. The dairy farmers of the county became interested in the work and launched a county-wide
campaign to rid their herds of the disease.erminally shipped by the State and national departments of animal industry tested 45,000 head of cattle. To follow up the work and make it permanent the Steuben county supervisors appropriated funds to employ a full-time veterinarian. Subsequent tests that have been made have materially increased the total of herds
under supervision.It is estimated that as a result of
the bovine tuberculosis eradication,
cattle values have increased about $5
a head in the county. The county
farm bureau reports that since the
campaign a large number of cattle
shipments have been made outside the
county. "Certified and Grade A milk
producers in the environs of large
Eastern cities are coming to Steuben
county to buy their milkers," says a statement from the farm bureau.Recently the state federation appointed a tuberculosis committee composed of H. E. Babcock, member of the legislative committee on the Na-tional Live Stock association, L. A.
Toan, president of the State Guernsey
Breeders' club; E. R. Zimmer, secretary of the State Holstein-Friesian association; M. E. Buckley of the Lincoln School of Agriculture, Westchester county, New York; and Jay Coryell,
state leader of farm bureaus. This committee is investigating the accredited herd plan as it is administered in
the various counties of New York
state with a view to formulating a permanent policy which will be acceptable to the dairymen of the state.
The New York state legislature has
been asked to appropriate about $2, 000,000 to pay indemnities owed
dairymen on cattle slaughtered under
the accredited herd plan and a sufficient sum in addition to carry on the work efficiently during the coming
year.

Undertaker Invented Phons.
Inventors who have new ideas which are foreign to their vocations or lines of business may derive encouragement from the fact that the inventor of the first practical system of automatic telephony was Almon B. Strowger of Kansas City, who took out a patent in 1889. The inventor of the Strowger system was an undertaker who was in no way connected with electrical engineering or with any telephone center.

The Little Corporal Masteres.
Napoleon was master of Paris and an excellent, but he was not quite master of the students of Paris, who were like other students all over the town. In 1810 at the Odeon when Lemercier's "Christopher Colomb" was being played, the Quarter Latin students raised riots during the first two performances to allow their disappearance of the fact that the unties of time and place were disregarded. Whereupon the emperor, with whom Lemercier was a favorite, announced that he would attend the third performance and severely punish anyone raising a disturbance. He carried out his intention, and all went smoothly until the third act, whereupon some was changed to the deck of a lumber ship. When the curtain about three-quarters of the audience, who were seated in the balcony, fell apparently asleep. This could easily be seen by Napoleon laughing, as his watch was disarranged.

Troubles Hardships of Leather.
A Norwegian engineer claims that he has discovered a process by which leather can be made two or three times as hard as it is normally, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. This is of very special interest in these days of high prices for footwear and other leather goods. While the leather can be made as hard as wood, it does not lose its elasticity, it is said, and acquires greater resistance to heat and moisture.

PLAN COMMODITY MARKETING
Approval Has Been Given by Board of Directors of Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

Approval of plans to develop commodity marketing sections of the farm bureaus in township, county and state, has been given by the board of directors of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation. Under this plan county commodity associations of wool growers, live-stock producers, and others will become a section of the farm bureau organization. This system, according to the board, will prevent duplication of organizations. It will allow the financing of single agencies for the maintaining of services necessary to cooperative marketing associations to serve various organizations for handling specific products. The Ohio board has also appointed a special committee to work on plans for commodity associations who wish to come under the new co-operative law which will soon become operative in that state.

The appointment is a popular one. The contributions and the support of the farmers go with Mr. Cunningham into his important new work. The spirit and the letter of the "dirt farmer" amendment are being carried out.

CUNNINGHAM OF IOWA GIVEN GREAT HONOR

"Dirt Farmer" Appointed to Federal Reserve Board.

E. H. Cunningham is the farmers' representative on the federal reserve board. The appointment was recently made by President Harding. Mr. Cunningham is a "dirt farmer." With his son he operates a 320-acre farm at Cresco, Ia. For three years Mr. Cunningham has served as secretary for the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation. He has also served as president of the United States Grain Growers' Inc., and is now a member of the board of directors of the National Live Stock Producers' association. As a member of the Farmers' Live Stock Marketing Committee of Fifteen, he helped work out the national plan for live stock marketing. He is also one of the organizers and a director of the Iowa Farm Credits' association.

Mr. Cunningham is noted for his vigorous championing of the farmers' cause. It is a favorite story among the farmers of Iowa that when the federal reserve board came into that state after the war and ordered the farmers to sell their products on a demoralized market and pay their notes at the bank, to "deflate" all costs, Mr. Cunningham told them bluntly to go to a place a great deal hotter than Iowa on a good corn-growing day.

The organized farmers of America have an idea that it is this type and leadership that will bring to agriculture the representation it needs on the federal reserve board.

Mrs. Harding had sensed rather than seen that something was wrong. She turned quickly and with a gasp half arose from her chair, cried: "Warren!" but he could not hear. She knew it and stumbling and running, she went to the door, flung it open and cried into the corridor: "Send Doctor Boone."

A moment before, Dr. Sawyer, noting that his patient seemed to be in the same condition as had continued all day, passed towards his own room. Mrs. Harding's cry brought him back but it was too late then for science or any mortal help to bring back that which had gone winging into the sunset.

Prepared for Death

Marion, Ohio, Aug. 3.—"President Harding had a premonition of death," Dr. George T. Harding, Jr., his brother said today.

"Warren evidently sensed danger," Dr. Harding said. "The President's last cited the sale of the Marion Star, the purchase of the old De Koon homes and in Morrow county the making of a new will shortly before the Western trip started as evidence that the President was concerned about his health and was getting his affairs in order."

Mrs. Harding Brave

San Francisco, Cal., Palace Hotel—Aug. 3.—Mrs. Harding, no longer the first lady of the land, but just a bereaved woman today is the bravest and strongest member of the grief-stricken party of those who accompanied President Harding on the trip that ended in his death. She is facing the fact of the President's death with "heroism." A statement given out from the Harding suite today stated she had faced it that way from the moment when she knew her husband was dead.

There has not been a moment since Mr. Harding became ill that Mrs. Harding has shown the slightest sign of weakness either of body or spirit; Doctor Sawyer said this morning.

"She is magnificent," he said. "She always has been a wonderful woman to meet an emergency. You can always count on her. He overcame quick from the crushing shock of Mr. Harding's death, Mrs. Harding took control of herself and of the situation in the death chamber last night. She gently directed when others were stunned to move. At 1:00 a. m. she was persuaded to retire and the nurse slept 'fitfully.' No one will ever know the inner story of those hours between 1:00 a. m. and dawn. She was alone then with her grief. There was nothing more to be done, nobody to be looked after any longer."

At the Mercy of Youth

On the note on James Russell Lowell's condition of "unbearable childhood" has been a correspondent to send us the following quotation from the letters of a little boy: "Although an angelic child as I was once described in my letters I am the youngest child in the family. In my curiosity and my eagerness and my imagination and my desire to help and my belief in goodness and justice."

Managing a Fortune.

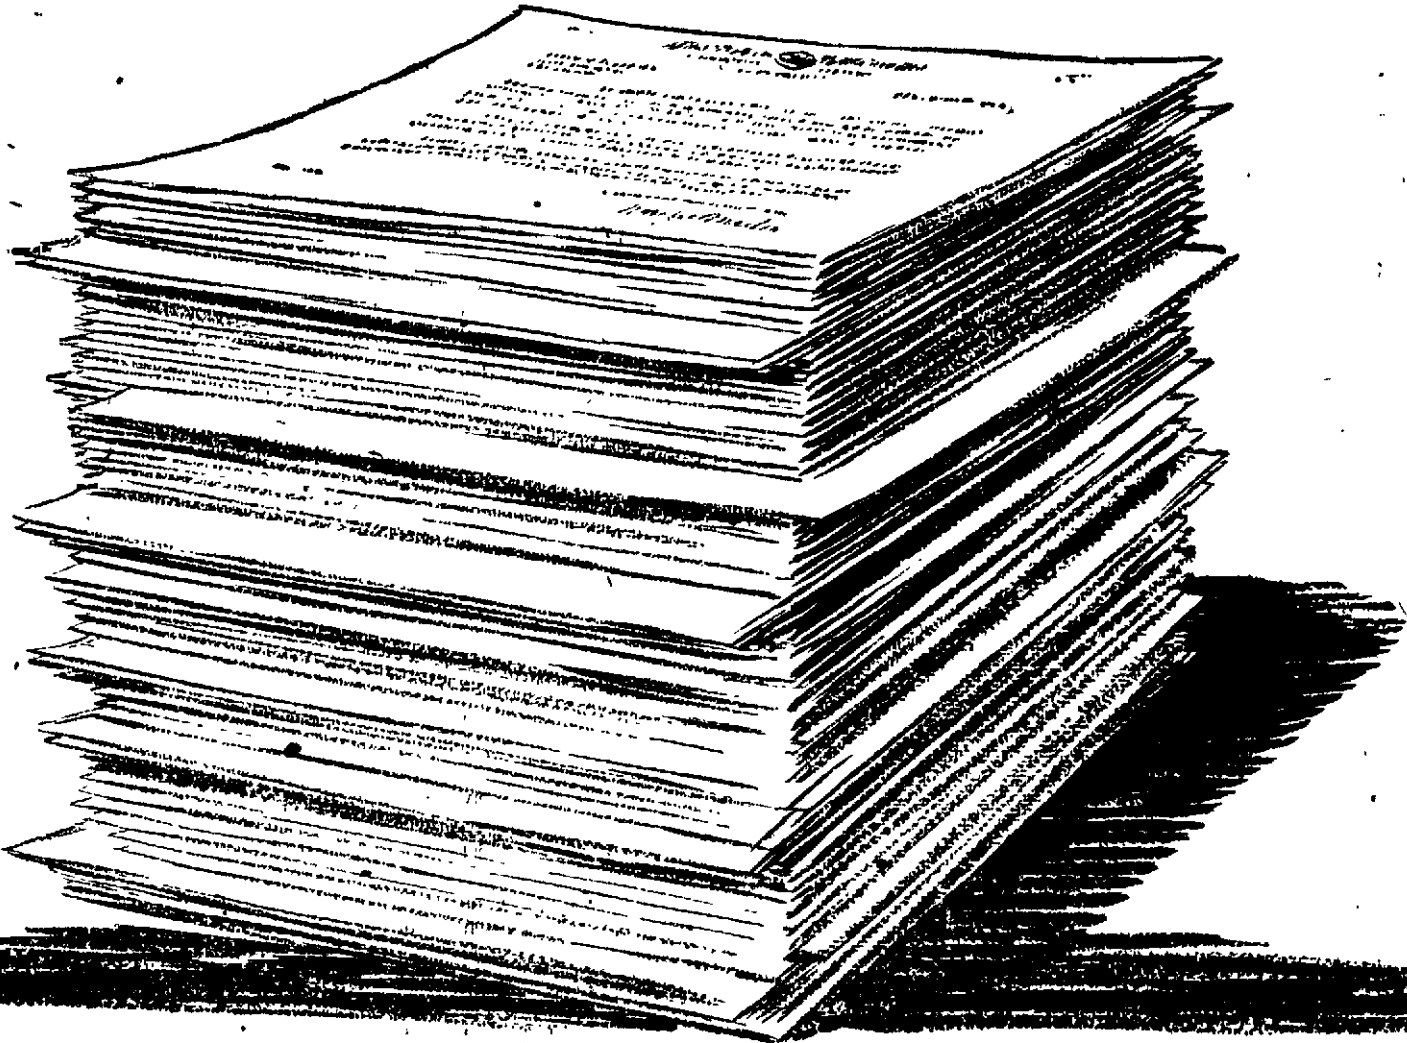

We should manage our fortune like our constitution; enjoy it when good, have patience when bad, and never apply violent remedies but in cases of necessity. Both foolish.

His Nurse

Miss Ruth Powderly, lady who was in attendance on President Harding. She nursed President Warren and Mrs. Harding in her recent illness.

FULL STORY OF THE LIFE OF WARREN G. HARDING

WARREN GAMALIEL HARDING was born on a farm just outside the village of Coatsien, Morrow county, Ohio, Nov. 2, 1865, in a two-room log house built by his father, G. T. Harding.

Here he spent his early days, attending the village school and doing chores on the farm which his father maintained to round out the slender income of a country physician.

Devoted to Mother, At his mother's knee Harding learned many of the principles to which he attributed his later success. His devotion to her was unlimited and when she became an invalid he never failed to have flowers sent to her every Sunday, even though he happened to be traveling in distant cities of America, or in foreign countries.

Harding grew fast but his ambitions grew faster. At the age of 14 he was six feet tall, but he was only 12 when he solemnly announced that some day he would be president of the United States.

The youngster learned rapidly. He mastered his letters in a single afternoon when he was still of the "kik and underpants" age, could memorize long poems before he was four, and was always anxious to "speak his piece" at gatherings.

Not a "Goody, Goody"

He was not of the "goody, goody" type, however. His manly qualities soon established him as the leader of his boy associates. He could swim farther and dive deeper than any of the other boys who frequented the "old swimmer's hole" in Whetstone creek, and stories are still told of his tobacco chewing prowess.

The boy Harding never sought a fight but was always ready to battle for a just cause, particularly to protect the weak from aggression.

In his 14th year "Doc" (as Harding was nicknamed) entered, as of academic grade, the Ohio Central College of Iberia, O. Here he received a B. S. degree, though sometimes forced to quit temporarily in order to earn sufficient money to continue the course.

This he did by doing odd painting and farm jobs, by driving a team on a railroad construction project, by working in a brickyard, and by working for short intervals in the village printing shop.

Edited College Paper.

Harding achieved distinction at Iberia as a student, as editor of the college paper and as a declaimer. To the college publication he gave the motto by which he ruled his life: Semper Paratus et Excelsior—Always ready to go higher. Through this sheet he first expounded his theory

Rotarians Of Three Clubs Make Merry

nopolized nearly all of her time and many ladies became very jealous. At the dinner Miss Murphy was introduced as such but when she arose to acknowledge the introduction "she removed her wig and there stood Ross Quigley. Ross got away with his stunt in great shape.

The early hours of the afternoon were taken up in the reception of the visitors, and every member, as well as the members of the various families, were made to feel that when they came to Clearfield for a good time, it was certain they would not be disappointed.

The first portion of the program was the initiation of two members into the Clearfield club, Messrs Leavy and Ellis being the victims in this instance. The degree team known as the Rot Neg Team, but they were far from that. The principal officers were assisted by huskies from the various clubs.

The Rot Neg team was sent out to get the victims and shortly returned with one of them in a rough box and the other in a laundry basket each being typical of his business. Then the degree work was carried out. The principal work was delivered by Grant Norris of Curwensville, and he proved himself to be a pastmaster.

Then everyone adjourned to the ball game, where they saw Clearfield triumph over DuBois. During the entire afternoon, however, there was dancing and this was a feature not neglected to any extent.

At 5:30 o'clock the big dinner was

of what young men should not do to succeed.

"Some young men who think themselves gifted with genius are inclined to the kangaroo style of progressing," he wrote. "They flatter themselves that they at least may attain to the heights of fame by a series of leaps, and that without training and hard work."

Upon graduation in 1882 Harding went to Marion, Ohio, inclined to carry out his father's wish that he study law. But fate and music intervened. He joined the local band as an alto cornetist. To take trips with the band required money. Therefore Harding abandoned the study of law to teach school, which he felt would be more likely to bring immediate financial returns.

Gets Marion Star.

He continued as teacher for one year; then read law for a year, selling insurance to pay expenses.

Came the day when the Marion Star, a paper which had failed, was offered at sheriff's sale for $300. Dr. Harding bought it and presented it to his son. Thus, before he was 18, Harding became publisher and staff of a country paper.

Harding now made his first active plunge into politics, seeking no office for himself, but boosting Republican policies so strenuously and courageously that, before he was 21, he was a power in town and county councils of the party.

The young editor struggled hard to keep the Star going and succeeded until he made a trip to the Republican national convention, to cheer for Blaine. The trip was expensive and when he returned he was forced to sell out.

Becomes a Reporter.

Harding obtained a job as reporter on the Marion Mirror, his enthusiasm for success and Blaine unabated. The first might have carried him far as a reporter had not the latter been so strong. The Mirror was a Democratic sheet and pro-Blaine utterances which Harding managed to slip into it caused the loss of his position.

Harding then determined to repurchase the Marion Star. He did so in partnership with "Jack" Warwick, a newspaperman and friend. They changed the Star from an independent to a staunch Republican paper—and this in a Democratic stronghold.

With the paper as likely to be a liability as an asset on the morrow, Harding courted and won the favor of Miss Florence Kling. But Father Amos Kling could see no future for the young newspaper editor and threatened to cut his daughter off without a dollar, should she marry Harding.

served by the ladies of Class No. 10 of the West Side M. E. church. This dinner was in most competent hands, and proved to be a great delight to those whose appetite was sharpened by the ride. It was during the meal that the real fun of the afternoon was enjoyed, as well as some more serious stuff. President Stewart presided, and barring occasional tilts with the "head waiter," got along famously. This "waiter" by the way, had a habit of shoving himself into all sorts of situations, quarrelling with Tim Allen, Doc Free and several others. His antics were highly amusing and it later developed that he was the well known entertainer Luke Barnett, of Pittsburgh. His touch to the program of enjoyment was a pleasure to every one.

During the dinner President Stewart called upon Ward Fleming, president of Philipsburg club; T. T. Allen of DuBois club; Doctor Free, of DuBois and several others. All responded briefly.

An entertaining feature of the afternoon was the appearance of Powell Weaver, a nationally known pipe organist. Lacking a pipe organ on which to play Mr. Powell did a pianologue, playing several appreciated numbers.

Another very notable feature was the appearance of Miss Mary Mitchell of Clearfield a singer to whom it is always a pleasure to listen. Miss Mitchell sang "The Last Rose of Summer."

Harding took a keen interest in Marion. He boosted for it, took part in many new enterprises to it. In many of these he took stock and became director. He was also trustee of the Baptist church, which he attended.

Harding's home became famous for its hospitality.

Elected State Senator.

Meantime Harding's power in politics grew rapidly, but it was not until 1890 that he sought office. In this year he was elected state senator, from the Thirtieth Senatorial District of Ohio. He was re-elected and became Republican leader in the senate.

His terms in the senate were followed by his election to the lieutenant-governorship in 1903. In 1910 he ran for governor but was defeated.

Harding made the speech nominating William Howard Taft for president at the Republican National Convention in 1912. In 1914 he was elected U. S. Senator from Ohio, and in 1916 was temporary chairman of the national convention, and delivered the keynote speech.

He was generally found in opposition to the Wilson administration during his first senate session, but became a staunch advocate of its measures in war time. After the Paris peace conference he again became a severe critic of Wilsonian policies.

Becomes President.

Harding was nominated for the presidency on the Republican ticket June 12, 1920, at the Chicago convention, being a compromise candidate when the leaders became deadlocked. This honor came to him on his father's birthday.

He made his campaign on an anti-League of Nations platform and was elected president by an overwhelming landslide which even denied the "solid South," Nov. 2, 1920, his 55th birthday.

He took the oath of office and became the 29th president of the United States, March 4, 1921.

Married in 1891.

Harding unabashed, built a house for his bride-to-be and they were married in it, July 8, 1891. Father Kling kept his word and it was many years before he would so much as speak to his son-in-law.

Mrs. Harding immediately set herself to aiding in her husband's work. She managed the business end while he devoted himself to the editorial department.

The Star now started on a rapid journey to success. Much of this success was due, according to its daughter, to the fact that his employer acted with him rather than for him. The paper was never any size but it was at his plant; he was the personal friend of every man on the staff.

Following the program in the auditorium, the crowd went to the outside where a concert by the American Legion band, under the direction of Harry Bridge, was heartily enjoyed. The American Legion band is an aggregation that has attained a splendid reputation for fine playing, and they richly deserved all of the hearty words of commendation given them.

It was a splendid outing in every sense of the word and truly enjoyed by every member present.

The Wedding Route.

It is reported that the "latest thing in wedding invitations is an engraving map showing the way to the church and to the house. Grinding perplexity is the mother of innovations. It is not so stated, but unquestionably this helpful scheme originated in Boston, where wedding guests have been known to lose themselves and wander around for hours through the tangled highways, not reaching the scene of the festival until the rice and old shoes had been thrown and everyone else was on the way home.—Providence Journal

The deceased was a daughter of the late John M. and Tabitha Chase and was born at the Chase homestead to Woodward township in May 28th, 1861, being therefore in her 62d year. Just What She Wanted.

There was a shriek and a splash, followed by another splash immediately afterward, as the would-be rescuer swam to where the lady had disappeared under the water. He caught her as she struggled to the surface and sought to calm her. "Don't struggle, madam," he spluttered. "We are quite safe; the lake is quite calm and as clear as a mirror and—" "Well, let go my arms, then, and let me look into it. I think my bath is coming down."

Roman Soldiers' "Smokes"
Records recently discovered show that the Roman soldiers in Caesar's time had their pipes. Of course they knew nothing about real tobacco, as that had not at that period been discovered. However, they did have pipes and they smoked lavender and hemp, and from all accounts they liked it and it served almost the same purpose. In fact, it is said to have been a great solace and stimulant to the soldiers.

RESPECTED RESIDENT DIES

Richard J. Duckett, a well known resident of this community, passed away at his home in Hilldale at 6:30 o'clock this morning, after an illness of several months, due to a series of strokes of paralysis, aged 77 years.

Richard Duckett was born in England of Irish parentage and came to this country, where a young man of 21 years, he located in Mountdale in the 70's and engaged in coal mining. He came to Clearfield about 1880 and had since resided on Hilldale. He followed coal mining and for several years prior to his health failing was employed as mine foreman by the Clearfield Clay Working Company. He was sober and industrious and lived the life of a good citizen always. A lifelong and devout member of the Catholic church he was one of the promoters and staunch supporters of the temperance movement among the young men of that faith in this section.

He suffered a stroke of paralysis two or three years ago and has been more or less of an invalid since that time.

He is survived by his widow and the following children: Martin, of Cleveland, Ohio; Thomas, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Bart, John, James, Leo, Mrs. Joseph Dewey and Miss Julia all of Clearfield and Mrs. E. H. Kolbe of Erie, Pa. One brother, Martin Duckett, of Kingston, Pa., also survives.

The funeral will be held from St. Francis church Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Interment will be made in Catholic cemetery.

Curwensville's Own Column

The ladies auxiliary of the American Legion at Curwensville, expect within the next few weeks, to stage a grand lawn fete at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Irwin, River street, the purpose of which is to raise a fund for the erection of a soldier's monument to be dedicated to the memory of the Civil and Spanish American war veterans. There will be dancing, refreshments and cake on the lawn, and arrangements will be made for the best of the present will have a good time. As this fund is for a case, it should be the aim of every man, woman and child residing in this patriotic community to assist the auxiliary ladies in their effort by their presence and patronage.

Joe Ward, whom many Curwensville people will remember as a barefooted kid running amuck some thirty years ago, was in town yesterday for a few hours, accompanied by his two manly sons and a son-in-law. Ward is now a staid citizen of Erie Pa., where he has made a good home and has been steadily employed by one firm for most twenty years back. His mother was a daughter of Joseph White who at one time was listed as a famous four horse stage driver over the old Erie Pike some sixty years ago.

Miss Alice Harley went to Harrisburg the fore part of this week to attend the funeral of John C. Gates, who had died very suddenly at his home near that city. During her absence the Harley home will be closed. Mrs. Kate Mitchell remaining in Clearfield with friends.

Misses Irene and Margaret Brownley arrived at the home of their aunt, Mrs. Edna Way from their home at Monhall, Pa., Wednesday and expect to visit for several weeks. Their mother who has been here for several weeks left Tuesday for her home.

A great picture, the 'Arabian Nights', under the auspices of Rhoda Rebecca lodge, I. O. O. F., will be shown in Curwensville on the night of the 15th. Each admission ticket entitles the holder to a share in the distribution of a grand Maxwell car, sport model, the winner being the one who holds the successful number as drawn by lot. The ladies have adopted this means of raising a sum of money which they have pledged for a good cause and no one should hesitate in purchasing a ticket to see this wonderful picture. It is worth more than the price paid for an admission ticket.

Nature plays some funny pranks. Yesterday Mrs. Harry Bilger went into the cellar for some potatoes which had been lying on the dirt floor. Great was her surprise to discover that from the sprouts on the old potato new potatoes had grown, some as large as a tea cup. She secured a sufficient number of the new ones for a dinner of four. She presented us with an old timer which bore four new fellows of good size. You need not take our word for this astounding story, as all you have to do is to look in the front window at the Fleming cigar store.

"Austin again in toils." This more or less stock phrase is again brought out and dusted off. The prisoner this time, however, is not Austin, but his wife, Alberta. She was arrested Wednesday by Officer Daniel Brin, after she had disobeyed the terms of her parole, which forced her to leave Phillipsburg within a stated time limit, that limit having expired finding her still in the town. It has become so customary for either Austin or his wife or both to be apprehended by the law that in one newspaper it was suggested as a type and time saver that the stock head, "Austin Again Arrested," be kept and used when one or both were again collared by the long arm of the law. Their many law breaking activities had kept them before one justice or another most of the time for many moons, until Austin was arrested and convicted of anti-Volstead and Mrs. Austin was paroled on the conditions mentioned. Her re-arrest followed her refusal to meet the conditions set forth by the judge.

Farmers of Louisiana Parish Also Make Big Saving in Purchase of Soil Fertilizers.

A profit of $1 a ton on cotton seed, and savings of $5.25 a ton on six carloads of acid phosphate and $15 to $18 a ton on three carloads of nitrate of soda for the last few months is the record in dollars and cents gained by farmers of Webster parish, Louisiana, who are members of the parish farm bureau according to L. "This is not only dollars made but it is dollars saved," Mr. Miller said. "Our accomplishments so far are only a drop in the bucket compared with the increased advantages we are going to gain over our short-sighted anti-bureau neighbors who continue to pay and sell individually against an organized world."

THE HUSKY KIDDIES DRINK OUR MILK

Look over the husky kiddies around your neighborhood. If they are bottle fed kiddies, nine out of every ten of them are walking advertisements for the goodness of our milk.

When your family physician tells you how to modify the milk for the first feedings and then tells you how to strengthen the mixture to keep pace with the growth of the youngster, the youngster begins to wax stronger and fatter as he goes along.

And another thing. The youngsters fed with our milk have less bowel trouble during the summer months and are less liable to sickness because our milk has gone through the pasteurization process.
